Nebraska legislators gave a presentation at the September Five-State Conference of their state's efforts to launch a veterinary school designed to serve the region. Representative Jay Fabrega reported that the goal is to train about 94 students each year. About 35 of these students would be from Nebraska while there would be about 15 each from the other four states. Nebraska is recruiting commitments from the other states for financial support. At least two other states must have agreed to participate in the program by the time the Nebraska authorization bill expires in 1983. Representative Fabrega brought back a three-page overview of the proposed regional program for veterinary education, research, and services for those of you who would like more detailed information. A copy of this document is available through the Legislative Council library.
